THE PENSION BILL PASSES THE SENATE. Washington, May 17 (Special).—The Senate passed to-day the general Pension bill which provides for an expenditure of $30,000,000. The only change made by the Senate is in the way of more clearly defining the legislation put into the bill by the House regarding soldiers' deaths. The Senste amended this in such a way as to require the widow to show that the solfer's death resulted from disabilities received in the line of duty. In other words the Senate amendment was designed to cut off widows of soldiers of the war of 1812 and of the Mexican war, who married their husbands simply as a matter of speculation, and who under the bill as it passed the House would in many cases have been entitled to draw arrearages for fty years or more. The debate again showed the Democrats in their favorite attitude whenever pension legislation is under discussion, of stepping to the blackboard and figuring out what it will cost. Mr. Cockrell and Mr. Beck distinguished themselves particularly. The former grew almost hysterical over an amendment which he proposed and which would have curtailed the amount paid to soldiers' widows, while the latter in speaking of the action of Colonel Matson in reporting the arrearages bill to the House, declared that he would propose an income tax upon pensions.

COLONEL MATSON'S PURPOSE TOO CLEAR. Washington, May 17 (Special).—It seems not im probable that Colonel Matson's attempt to accumulate ditical capital for use in his canvass for the Goverrship of Indiana may react against himself and leave him poorer than ever. Colonel Matson, as chair-man of the Committee on Invalid Pensions in the man of the Committee on invalid remains in the House, supported the Dependent Pension bill, which was vetoed by President Cleveland. He has also steadily opposed in the committee, as well as expressed himself outside the committee as opposed to pressed himself outside the committee as opposed to the proposition to reopen the Arrearages act and yet a few days ago he reported favorably a bill for that purpose. It is now alleged on good authority that he was not authorized by a vote of the committee to report that measure. It had been read in committee, but no opportunity to amend it was offered, and it is certain that some members of the committee were surprised when it was reported to the House. There has been nothing in Colonel Matson's past course as chairman of the committee to warrant the supposition that he now favors the measure in good faith. "The Washington Post" accuses him openly in its editorial columns of bad faith toward the sol-diers in reporting a bill which he knows cannot be-come a law and which he is known not to favor. The Union veterans of Indiana are not fools, and it will not take them long to understand Colonel Matson's

COMMANDER PHILIP'S SILVER PITCHER. Washington, May 17 (Special).—The petty restric-tions which surround men in the service of the Government are well illustrated in the case of Commander John W. Philip, of the Navy, in whose behalf a bill has just passed both houses of Congress. In Janu ary, 1884, the Colombian Government sent to the Government of the United States a request that an officer of the Navy be detailed to inspect a revenue cutter ing built for that Government at Wilmington, Izel Commander Philip was detailed for the duty. He made the examination and reported on the condition of the cutter. In return for this courtesy the Colombian Government desired to present to Commander Philip a silver pitcher. The State Department was informed of the desire of the Government of Colombia, and Secretary Bayard sent to the late Senator Miller, of California, a request that Congressional action be had in the matter. The sickness of Senator Miller prevented his acting in the matter, and so it came over to this Congress, which has just acted on it. Commander Phillip may now receive his sliver pitcher in peace after four years' waiting for it.

RECTIFYING A POSTAL ERROR. Washington, May 17 (Special).-The Senate passed s afternoon the bill for the relief of the American Grocer Association of New-York, publishers of a paper known as "The American Grocer." The Postster-General on July 5, 1877, decided that this publication was an advertising sheet and not entitled to second-class rates of postage. Accordingly for the issue of that month the publishers were compelled to pay $648 instead of $102 for postage. The Post-master-General afterward reversed his decision, but as the money had been covered into the Treasury the only way to get it out again was to pass a special law. The claim has been pending in Congress for ten years.

MR. JASPER COURTS INVESTIGATION.

MISS MASON'S SCHOOL TRUSTEES THINK HER IN-NOCENT OF THE CHARGE.

School Commissioners Webb, Purdy, Holt, Lummis and Vermilye, the special committee appointed to look into the charges of neglect of duty on the part of John Jasper, Superintendent of Public Schools, in not investigating the alleged immorality of a female school teacher, will meet to-day at 4 p. m., at the building of the Board of Education. Mr. Jasper said yesterday that he was delighted to have an investigation, so that he might have an opportunity to demolish the hazy charges. It is expected also that the trustees of the Fifteenth Ward will transmit to this special committee report, covering the labors of several weeks, completely exonerating the teacher of all charges made

Miss Virginia W. Mason, of Grammar School No. 35, is the teacher involved in the scandal. She is charged with improper conduct with Robert McMaster, a wholesale poultry dealer in Washington Market. This charge was made against her several years ago and she frankly told Mr. Jasper all that he wished to know, Mr. McMaster does not live with his wife. Miss Mason said then that she constantly received anonymous notes and postal cards slandering her. Stephen A. Walker, then president of the Board of Education, ordered the case to be dropped. It was revived lately, and again by anonymous ocumunications. The case was investited thoroughly by the trustees of the Fifteenth Ward and Emerson Foote, of that committee, said yesterday that the committee had not found any evidence that would in the least tend to criminate Miss Mason. The committee's labors extend over a period of several

A detective, who is said to have been hired by two Commissioners hostile to Mr. Jasper, swore that he saw Mr. McMaster one night enter the flat in which Miss on lives, in West One-hundred-and-twenty-fifth-st. and that he did not leave the flat that night. The janitor, on the other hand, testified that Mr. McMaster oft the flat at 9 o'clock, shortly after the spy went away to get his dinner. As to her Western trip with Mr. McMaster, she him in Saginaw and travelled with him to Ruffalo, where she met her brother.

Charles Gates, principal of Miss Mason's school, oke warmly of her character. Miss Mason herself taid that at present she would not say anything, as she was acting under the advice of her friends, but she believed that she was being used by the opponents of Mr. Jasper, to defeat his re-election. Mr. Gates, the principal of the school, remarked yesterday: "The principal of the school, remarked yesterday: "The tharge against Miss Mason is an old story, and without puestion a bit of malice against the young lady. I alked it over with Mr. Jasper some time ago, and we leelded that there was nothing in it. The trustees have he investigation in charge and I understand that the majority are satisfied that there is nothing in it." Tresident Simmons said that Miss Mason had never been bermaily accused before Mr. Jasper.

REBUKED BYJUDGE BARNETT

A MAN MUST TREAT HIS WIFE PROPERLY. JACOB A. VANDERBILT ORDERED TO INCREASE THE MONTHLY ALLOWANCE FOR HIS WIFE-AFFI-DAVITS ON WHICH THE VIGOROUS

DECISION WAS BASED. Jacob Hand Vanderbilt, jr., is being sued in the Supreme Court by Mary Vanderbilt, his wife, for a limited divorce, on the ground of abandonment and failure to support her. The defendant is the son of Captain Vanderbilt and a cousin of William H. Vanderbilt. The case came before Judge Barrett, at Chambers, in April, on a motion by Sackett and Bennett, Mrs. Vanderbilt's counsel, for temporary alimony and coun-sel fee. Judge Barrett's decision was filed yesterday.

The plaintiff says in her papers that she is daughter of parents in humble circumstances, living in Central New-York; that she made the acquaintance of the defendant while visiting in this city, and that he afterward visited her at her country home, and finally made a proposal of marriage, which she accepted several months before the marriage took place. her that his first wife was dead, and that he had two little children who were cared for by his father, Jacob Hand Vanderbilt, sr., at his home on Staten Island. He said that his father was a millionaire and a brother of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt; that he was in receipt of an annuity under the will of William H. Vanderbilt of $2,000, and that his father also made him an annual allowance of $1.200, and that he was besides the owner of personal property of various kinds and of consider able value. He told her, however, that his father had been very angry and had raised a great disturbance at the time of his former marriage, because it was made without his consent and because the bride was poor, and that if he should learn of the contemplated marriage with her, his father would never forgive him. Therefore, it was necessary that they should be married under an assumed name, and in order completely to de-ceive his father, he would have to spend a portion of the time each year at his home on Staten Island, where he lived with him. MARRIED UNDER AN ASSUMED NAME. The plaintiff says she consented to this, and that they were married under an assumed name in this city in the spring of 1886. They began housekeeping in a furnished flat in Seventy-second-st, where they lived until October. Then they rented a little house in Harlem, and lived there until April, 1887. During this time Mr. Vanderbilt was absent at his father's home a portion of each week, in order to keep up the deception, as he told her.

They then hired a furnished cottage near Long Branch and lived there from the spring of 1887 up to the middle of June. They had very many household articles and a great quantity of silverware which he had given to her and told her should be hers. In the early part of June, 1887, for the first time since their marriage, he absented himself for more than a weak from the house without giving any reason, and when at length he returned on June 20 his manner toward her was entirely changed. Instead of the loving husband he had at times before been, he had become unkind and harsh in his manner and speech toward her. This he explained by saying that his father had learned of the marriage and was very angry. His father de-clared, he said, that they must separate, and that he was to have nothing more to do with her; failing this he would disinherit him and his two children, and further, if he found that he violated this injunction he would throw him out of doors. He said there was nothing else for him but to follow his father's com-

Mrs. Vanderbilt told him that she thought they could live on the income which he had assured to him and take care of the children as well, and she wanted him to do this. His reply was that this would be impossible. His life had been such that he could not give up what he had been accustomed to enjoy. He added that his father in-sisted upon their leaving the Long Branch House, and upon him returning to his roof, while his wife could go some place cisc. She begged him to go back to his father and ask the old man to come to her and talk the matter over, in which case she believed she could induce him to relax his stern decision. Her husband promised to do this, and went away. The next time she saw him he told her that his father was firmer than ever, and that he refused to see her. He asserted, besides, that the old man had cut off his previous allowance of $1,200 a year. VISITING HER HUSBAND ON STATEN ISLAND. The plaintiff also states in her affidavit that on June 25 there was a meeting in this city between Mr. Vanderbilt, the husband; Augustus C. Brown, Captain Vanderbilt's lawyer, and herself and her counsel, Henry W. Szekett. On that occasion Mr. Vanderbilt said that if there was a separation he would give her $1,000 a year, but that he must follow his father's wishes and give her up. She went back to the New-Jersey cottage and remained about two weeks without having received any communication see the defendant at his father's house. He again clared that his mind was made up to do as his father demanded and he could not live with her any longer. She replied that she could not return to New-Jersey as she had no money and that there was no other place left her to go. He bade her go to the Wellington Hotel on Forty-seventh-st., and said that he would pay the bill. She remained there about a week, but he gave her no money and she was obliged to soll her lowelry in order to pay her hotel bill and meet other expenses. In the beginning of July her husband went to the Wellington Hotel and took her to an expensive boarding-house in Fifth-ave., but left her without any ad ditional funds. A day or two afterward he sent her telegram, in which he said: Have been to New-Jersey. Packed trunks. Sent them to your house to-day. Had to do it.

A few days later he removed from the New-Jersey house to his father's house on Staten Island all th valuable silverware and some other household articles he had previously given to her.

SIXTY DOLLARA A MONTH RECEIVED.

From June 20 to the time that the action was aken in July, 1887, the only money or means which the plaintiff had received from her husband was $12 which he gave her in June. About August 20 she received a telegram announcing her brother's death in Central New-York, and upon that fact being communicated to the defendant's counsel $50 was sent to her. Since that time $60 a month has been regularly sent her through her counsel. She attended her brother's funeral, and remained at her old home until October, when she received a telegram from Mr. Vanderbilt, asking her to neet him on her way to New-York. She met him and he took her to a boarding-house, where she has since been-Mrs. Kline's, No. 20 East Forty-seventh-st. There their correct name of Vanderbilt was given. The defendant picked out a room for her at $15 week, and when the plaintiff suggested that that was too high a price, he said that he wanted her to have as too high a price, he said that he wanted her to have as good a place as that, and assured her he would sead her sufficient money to enable her to pay that amount for board. But he didn't, and she received nothing up to the time of the making of the motion, but the $60 a month. She found herself unable to retain a $15 room and had to take an unheated hall bedroom, where she has been living during the last winter, with the result that she contracted a severe cold, became seriously ill, and was unable for lack of funds to pay a physician, or to procure suitable clothing for winter, or other necessities. Her husband refused also to allow her to take out of the storage warehouse furniture which had been given to her when they were living in Harlem, and which had been stored in his name when she desired to make other arrangements for more economical living.

BEGGING HIS WIFE TO DROP THEIR NAME.

BEGGING HIS WIFE TO DROP THEIR NAME. When the room had been engaged at Mrs. Kilne's she received a letter from her husband to this effect:

Clove Hill, Oct. 17, 1887. My Dear Wife: I am very sorry that you took the nam of Vanderbilt where you are, for it is not your name and you know it. It may be according to law, but that is not everything. If you continue to live under that name I will be a beggar almost and will have to support my children myself, and my home, where I was born and brought up, will pass into other hands and will be mine no more. I will send you what I said I would send you if I can send it to your name, at any place you name, but won't send is to Mrs. Vanderbilt, for there is no such person, and you know that, too. Now, dear child, for heaven's sake think, and if you have any of the old love left you will do it for the sake. YOUR AFF. HUSBAND.

YOUR AFF. HUSBAND.

The defendant also says in the afildavit that her husband is living at his father's house surrounded with all the luxures of a home of wealth without any expense to himself and his children provided for also by his father.

The affidavit of Mr. Sackett, plaintiff's counsel, was also presented in which it is said that Mr. Vanderbilt told Mr. Sackett that if he would see Mr. Brown, the "father's lawyer," that an arrangement would be made by which the plaintiff would be provided for Mr. Sackett did so. Mr. Brown said that he had nothing to give from the defendant but that the "father, Captain Vanderbilt, would agree to give her soo a menth upon the condition that she would consent to make no other claims upon the defendant as his wife, give up the name of Vanderbilt and return to her old home and live there." He said that if she would consent to these terms a check for the first fifty dollars was ready for her. Mr. Sackett declined, to receive the money upon those conditions.

LIVING IN A COLD HALL BED-BOOM.

LIVING IN A COLD HALL BED-ROOM. An affidavit was also presented for Mr. Vanderbilt, made by Mrs. Elizabeth Kline, the landlady of the boarding-house where she is living. She states that when Mr. Vanderbilt came with his wife to the house PITTSBURG JUST SAVED ITSELF.

as those he had chosen for her at $15 a week. When her husband had gone away Mrs. Vanderbilt came to her and said that the amount of money that she her husband had gone away at the hold to live upon was somewhat uncertain and she had to live upon was somewhat uncertain and she was afraid she could not keep the $15 room which her husband had engaged. It was thereupon arranged that she would have a hall-room at $12, which was subsequently reduced to $10 a week. This was not a proper room for a woman, and especially a woman so delicate as the plaintiff to occupy in cold weather. During the extreme cold weather of last winter it was not even in a condition for such a person to sleep in. Cold days the plaintiff was frequently invited into the sitting-room by Mrs. Kline's daughters but she showed delicate rejuctance in availing herself much of that privilege. She did not have sufficient clothing to enable her to go out upon cold days and the severe attacks of sickness which in two or three cases were extremely serious, were aggravated, if not caused by exposure and insufficient clothing of Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Kline urged her to have a physician, but her reply was that she could not afford it, that she had no reply was that she could not afford it, that she had no means even to pay for one. After each attack of means even to pay for one. After each attack of sickness the appeared to suffer from nervous prostration. With the knowledge of the plaintiff Mrs. Kline went to Mr. Sackett and gave him the first intimation he had had of Mrs. Vanderbilt's serious and long-continued illness, and asked if some steps could not be taken to make suitable provision for her. During the time she was in Mrs. Kline's house "she has always been of quiet and modest demeanor, and has won the regard and esteem of every member of the household. She has seldom gone away from the house, the most of her absences having been in her going to church with the landiady."

he said he wanted her to have as comfortable quarters of her absences having been in her going to caurea with the landiady."

The affidavits also show that after Mrs. Kline had informed plaintiff's counsel of her serious filness and her need for medical attendance, he brought the fact to the attention of Mr. Vanderbill's lawyers and asked them if some suitable provision could not be made for having her necessities attended to, but after consultation with their client they declined to make any additional provision. Thereupon these proceedings were brought before the court.

THE ANSWER MADE FOR MR. YANDERBILT. J. and C. McNamee appeared for Mr. Vanderbilt upon the motion. James McNamee is Mr. Vanderbilt's brother-in-law. In the answering affidavit Mr. Vanderbilt says that he has paid $60 a mouth allowance to his wife since last July, and that he has not concealed or disposed of any of his property or property rights in view of this litigation, but has used his income in paying his legitimate debts. That he was born and has always resided at his father's house, "a secluded country place on Staten Island. yond receiving a fair school education in has not be trained nor is he qualified by experience for any particular business or employment, but has speut the greater portion of his time in and about his home in pursuits which have not been pecuniarily remunerative." In 1874-75 he was employed as an assistant discount clerk in the New-York Bank, and afterward went on a somewhat extended trip to Europe. In 1876 he acted as collector in a freighting business, but the position held out such small hopes of improving that he resigned the place.

In the fail of 1877 his mother died, and a few months later he married his first wife and "lived thereafter quietly at his father's home, his father, wife and himself composing the entire family until the birth of his two children in '79 and '83, in the spring of which year his wife died, leaving in the family only himself and his father, who over twenty years ago retired from active business and who is now over eighty years of age, and two very small children. The allowance that he received from his father and william H. Vanderbilt were spent very quickly after their receipt, and since 1876 he has not had beyond occasional presents any income except $3,200 a year received from them.

UNABLE TO OBTAIN EMPLOYMENT. "It is true that deponent had," Mr. Vanderbilt continues in his affidavit, "earnestly endeavoyed to obtain employment in some capacity regardless of amount of salary in various quarters, both from friends and acquaintances, and also from members of his family and his family connections who have had positions at command, but it is a fact that he has never been able to obtain one. His family have apnever been able to obtain one. His family have apparently been an obstacle in many quarters to his obtaining a small position, and he, not being qualified by experience, could not obtain large ones or enter upon any businers upon his own account. As corroborating this, deponent has in his possession a letter from the late William H. Vanderbilt dated December, '79, in which occurs this statement: 'I have for some time past endeavored to find a position suitable for you, either in or out of our service, and failing to do so, I have adopted this method (a check presenting a sum of money) of showing my appreciation and kindly feeling.'

unworthy. Independent of the course which he says his father compelled him to adopt, his treatment of the plain to that kind of dictation for worldly reasons, he should at least have softened the blow by kindness and considera-tion. Instead of sympathy, she seems to have received nothing but heartlessness and coldness. The court will not suffer her to be starved into submission by the defendant or his father. The pretences as to the defendant's limited means are shallow in view of his leading a life of ease at his father's house while his wife is permitted suffer for the want of fire in her bedroom. Even if e income avowedly coming to the defendant be alone unsidered and his other property, he should be required make decent provision for his wife. In endeavoring to avoid an approaching train, young Holden lost his footing and fell between the tracks to the street, breaking his back. The other boys hastily gained the street and informed Matthew E. Gregger, of No. 2.412 Third-ave., who was passing, of the accident. Gregger had the unfortunated inmodistry removed in a wagon to his cousin's house, where he died inside of half an hour. The lad's mother was notified, and was almost prostrated when the was notified, and was slimost prostrated when she saw the dead body of her son.

Pittsburg, May 17.—There was a general kick when Umpire Valentine called to-day's game at the close of the ninth inning. Both captains were objecting and the 1,500 people present did not enjoy that close to an exciting contest. The fact was that the local team had begun to get used to the seductive twists of Mr. Koefo and it looked so if they might win with another chance. The game seemed lost when the New-Yorks made their three runs in the second inning. The Pittsburgs did great work in the field and to Sunday's and Fields's base-running is due two of the runs gained by the home team. Both G and Keefe pitched well. The score was as follows:

FOUR COLLEGE RECORDS BROKEN.

COLUMBIA ATHLETES DO NOBLE DEEDS IN THE PRESENCE OF THEIR FAIR ADMIRERS.

The Columbia College Athletic Association held its annual spring games at the Manhattan grounds yesterday afternoon. The weather was fine, the track was in good condition, and the large number of young ladies who were present combined to inspire the students in their efforts for athletic fame, and in consequence four college records were broken. The most exciting contest was the tug of war between the Sophomore and Junior classes, and which resulted in a tie. S. McGuire, '89, while pressing E. J. Haistead, P. and S., on the last lap of the two-mile bicycle race was thrown from his wheel and struck the ground heavily, where he lay intil one of the judges ran to his assistance. He was more contests, the Sophomores gained twelve first prizes and eight second prizes, while the Freshmen took two and eight second prizes, while the Freshmen took two first and three second prizes. That Tired Feeling

Is experienced by almost every one at this season, and many people resort to Hood's Sarsaparilla to drive away the languer and exhaustion. The blood, indem with impurities which have been accumulating for months, moves sluggishly through the velus, the mind fails to think quickly, and the body is still slower to respond. Hood's Sarsaparilla is just what is needed. It purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, makes the head clearer, creates an appetite, overcomes that tired feeling, tonce the nervous system, and imparts new strength and vigor to the whole body.

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring tonic, and I recommend it to all who have that miserable tired feeling."
